Today is the first Friday in August, and that means it's the start of the state's annual tax-free weekend, which lasts through midnight Sunday night.

Each year at this time, South Carolina eliminates all sales and use taxes for the entire weekend on dozens of items. The exemptions also include local sales taxes, including any penny taxes.

The annual sales tax holiday traditionally helps parents and students save money as they get ready for school. Back-to-school supplies are always popular sale items this weekend, but many other items — including clothing, accessories, shoes/footwear, computers and software — are also tax-free for the three days.

Many local retailers have been preparing for this weekend for weeks, and at several stores Thursday, employees were putting the finishing touches on various display areas.

Shaffer: Firing was retaliation

Former chief implicates mayor, tells grievance committee he was prevented from disciplining dishonest officer

BY SHARRON HALEY
Special to The Sumter Item

MANNING — Former Manning Police Chief Blair Shaffer cited personal retaliation by Manning Mayor Julia Nelson and an effort by city officials to stop him from following state law as the main reasons he was fired last month.

Shaffer made those statements during a grievance hearing on Thursday morning where he presented documentation alleging city officials did not follow state law or the city's policies in terminating his employment.

City Administrator Scott Tanner was first to appear before the city's Grievance Committee. In his presentation, Tanner read the termination letter he personally delivered to Shaffer on July 11. Tanner cited the following reasons Shaffer was terminated by the city's Public Safety Committee: "yelling and speaking in harsh tones" to a city official; raising his voice to a judicial official; failing to follow city policies in promoting officers in his department; and asking police officers to sign a letter affirming that they understood the police department's "chain of command," a letter that Tanner said could raise "possible First Amendment" issues.

Tanner also told the members of the committee that Shaffer's conduct toward city and judicial officials was "unprofessional" and that he should never use a tone that at least one council member, whom Tanner did not name, described as "harsh and heated" in any communication with his "superiors" on city council.

In his address to the committee, Shaffer questioned the validity of each of the PSC's reasons for his termination including issues raised in his July 11 termination letter.

Shaffer told the committee members the meeting in which he allegedly raised his voice was not a "public meeting."

"It was a private meeting with the PSC committee and Scott Tanner, and it was an executive session meeting," Manning's former police chief said. "They were not following policies."

Shaffer told the Grievance Committee he did receive permission for the promotions that the PSC considered a violation of the city's policy.

"The promotions were not done in violation," Shaffer said. "Mr. Tanner did approve the promotions. I presented to Mr. Tanner, and he approved each promotion."

In his rebuttal following Shaffer's comments, Tanner admitted he did sign off on the promotions.

"I did sign off on the promotions," Tanner told the committee. "At the time, I was unaware of an internal policy that was passed in 2011. I was unaware of the policy."

Shaffer told the committee that city officials cited public "safety" as a reason for his termination.

Shaffer said he presented council with a report on crime statistics since he became chief in 2008. Shaffer said statistics show that violent crime has decreased during his tenure as police chief.

"Violent crime is down 38 percent. Property crime is down 10 percent. Overall crime is down 14 percent," Shaffer said.

Shaffer also told the committee a report from Todd

Palmetto Health offers tips for using, buying book bags

SUBMITTED

A new school year is just around the corner and parents are busy stocking up on school supplies. Many parents like to take advantage of the tax-free weekend, Aug. 3-5. With backpacks topping most students' checklists, Palmetto Health Children's Hospital offers some tips to keep in mind when purchasing and using backpacks.

According to Palmetto Health Children's Hospital's Mark Locke, M.D., pediatric orthopedic surgeon with Palmetto Health-USC Orthopedic Center, "Back pain is not an uncommon complaint for children and adolescents, particularly those in middle school. It seems that every year the books get thicker and book bags get heavier."

Parents may have the concern that book bags contribute to spinal deformities such as scoliosis. "There is clear medical evidence that there is no link between heavy book bags and scoliosis," Locke said.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission estimates that nearly 5,000 emergency room visits each year are due to injuries related to book bags. Many students have no lockers or limited access to lockers between classes because of security or disciplinary issues.

"Twenty years ago, it was rare for a child to complain of back pain. Now, this type of pain is seen daily," Locke said. "Book bag-related pain seems to be most prevalent in middle school-aged children, who sometimes carry loads of up to 20 percent of their body weight."

Locke said heavy book bags and those carried on one shoulder can contribute to postural problems. Rolling book bags are an option, but not a solution. Although it is better to pull than to carry heavy books, rolling bag weight can lead to its own set of problems, such as arm and leg pain.

"If a child is having back pain, the newest recommendation from the American Academy of Pediatrics is to schedule an MRI because it has no radiation, as compared to a CT scan or an X-ray," Locke said.

Book bag and backpack injuries are avoidable. Here are a few backpack safety tips to keep in mind before sending your child off to school:

- Use both shoulder straps;
- Lap belts or roller bags may be helpful;
- Pack heavy items close to back; and
- Keep the weight of the bag less than 15 percent of body weight.

Locke urged parents to weigh their children's book bags and to notice if the child tends to lean forward while wearing the backpack. "That's a sign that it is too heavy," he said. Locke also recommended that children do core-strengthening exercises, such as Zumba, Pilates or yoga plank poses.

"As technology advances in the classroom, children will likely carry electronics rather than books. Hopefully this issue eventually will become a problem of the past," Locke said.

Sumter County Prevention Team event is more than just a bash

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Sumter County Prevention Team will host its fourth-annual Parents Accessing Resources for Kids event from 10 a.m. to noon on Saturday at University of South Carolina Sumter's Nettles Auditorium, 200 Miller Road.

The event is free and open to all parents or guardians of children from birth to 18 years of age.

PARK is not just a Back to School Bash but a mini conference that will help give parents the footing they need to encourage their child's school success, said Sumter Prevention Team and PARK chairperson Latrell Billie.

A variety of vendors — representatives from Sumter School District, health clinics, after-school programs, local social service agencies, extracurricular activity programs and other family friendly programs — will have tables set up to provide important information to help your child have a successful school year.

Parents and caregivers will also receive information from experts about education, health and community resources, and Sumter School District administrators will also be present to welcome everyone to a new academic school year.

There will also be door prizes and giveaways for all adults, including a grand prize — a laptop — and teachers who participate this year will also receive a gift.

PARK is organized and sponsored by Sumter County Prevention Team coalition — an organization with more than 20 years of experience — which provides a forum for coordinated efforts of multiple agencies.

Sumter County Prevention Team meets at 8:30 a.m. on the first Friday of each month at 115 N. Harvin St., and community members and agencies are more than welcome to attend.

Employees at Staples, an office and school supply retailer, on Broad Street know how busy this weekend can be, and it will be "all hands on deck" at the store, according to assistant store manager Tanisha Grooms.

Management and staff have intentionally positioned popular back-to-school items in the front of the store and middle aisle area for easy access.

ITEMS THAT WILL HAVE NO SALES TAX:

- Clothing
- Clothing accessories
- Footwear
- School supplies
- Bed and bath items

NON-EXEMPT ITEMS:

- Jewelry, cosmetics, eyewear
- Furniture
- Digital cameras
- Digital music players
- Cellphones, smartphones

ON THE WEB:

* For a full listing of exempt and non-exempt items, go to www.dor.sc.gov/taxfreeweekend.

Many hot items — including pencils, paper (both college- and wide-ruled), tablets, folders and crayons — are also on sale at discounted prices, in addition to being tax free. There's a limit of 30 of each item that can be purchased at one time at discounted prices, Grooms said. After 30, prices go back up. She said that allows other shoppers to take advantage of the deals.

Today and Saturday, the store is also running a sale associated with backpacks: Purchase a backpack and get 20 percent off all school supplies that you buy. (Those items will already be tax-free also.)

"Themed" backpacks and matching accessories — these showing sharks — are popular this year with elementary school students, according to Staples General Manager Ryan Boothe.

Staples General Manager Ryan Boothe said themed items with accessories have been popular this summer, and he expects that to continue this weekend.

Various themed items at the store include llamas, sharks, ice cream and skateboards, among others, Boothe said.

"A lot of the younger, elementary school kids like the themed items, where the backpack design is matched with the accessories, such as rulers, binders, lunchbag and notebooks," he said.

Bright-colored backpacks (think: neon) also seem to be a growing trend for all kids, he said.

The store also expects to sell a lot of computers, printers, ink and toner this weekend, Boothe added.

At checkout, all customers can also receive an additional 10 percent discount this weekend off back-to-school supplies and also other items that are not even tax free — such as coffee — but they must request it, he said.

Just down Broad Street at Sumter Mall, various stores were gearing up for the sales tax holiday weekend.

rue 21, which specializes in young men and women's casual clothing, has numerous items on sale, according to assistant store manager Terri Fernet.

Screen T-shirts, dresses and rompers and young men's woven shirts are all buy one, get one free, she said.

JCPenney also wants to be a top shopping destination for all back-to-school essentials, according to store training supervisor Angela Oseland.

The retailer has a full line of back-to-school uniforms (to include extended sizes), shoes and backpacks.

Oseland said sale items from today through Sunday include 50 percent off select styles of juniors' Arizona dresses, 50 percent off kids' Izod uniforms and 60 percent off Xersion sportswear.

For the first time on tax-free weekend, JCPenney customers can also earn $10 in Bonus Bucks — a bounce-back coupon — for every $50 spent in a single transaction, up to three times.

The store will also be open extended hours each day — today, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.; and Sunday 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

According to the state Department of Revenue, shoppers throughout the Palmetto State go out in big numbers during the tax holiday.

Historically, the state agency estimates shoppers save between $2 million and $3 million during tax-free weekend each year.

After decades of silence, nuns talk about abuse by priests

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Revelations that a prominent U.S. cardinal sexually abused and harassed his adult seminarians have exposed an egregious abuse of power that has shocked Catholics on both sides of the Atlantic. But the Vatican has long been aware of its heterosexual equivalent — the sexual abuse of nuns by priests and bishops — and done little to stop it, an Associated Press analysis has found.

An examination by the AP shows that cases of abused nuns have emerged in Europe, Africa, South America and Asia, demonstrating that the problem is global and pervasive, thanks to the sisters' second-class status in the church and their ingrained subservience to the men who run it.

Yet some nuns are now finding their voices, buoyed by the #MeToo movement and the growing recognition that even adults can be victims of sexual abuse when there is an imbalance of power in a relationship. The sisters are going public in part to denounce years of inaction by church leaders, even after major studies on the problem in Africa were reported to the Vatican in the 1990s.

"It opened a great wound inside of me," one nun told the AP. "I pretended it didn't happen."

Wearing a full religious habit and clutching her rosary, the woman broke nearly two decades of silence to tell AP about the moment in 2000 when the priest to whom she was confessing her sins forced himself on her, mid-sacrament.

The assault — and a subsequent advance by a different priest a year later — led her to stop going to confession with any priest other than her spiritual father, who lives in a different country.

The extent of the abuse of nuns is unclear, at least outside the Vatican. However, this week, about half a dozen sisters in a small religious congregation in Chile went public on national television with their stories of abuse by priests and other nuns — and how their superiors did nothing to stop it.

A nun in India recently filed a formal police complaint accusing a bishop of rape, something that would have been unthinkable even a year ago. And cases in Africa have come up periodically; in 2013, for example, a well-known priest in Uganda wrote a letter to his superiors that mentioned "priests romantically involved with religious sisters" — for which he was promptly suspended from the church until he apologized in May.

"I am so sad that it took so long for this to come into the open, because there were reports long ago," Karlijn Demasure, one of the church's leading experts on clergy sexual abuse and abuse of power, told AP in an interview.

The Vatican declined to comment on what measures, if any, it has taken to assess the scope of the problem globally, or to punish offenders and care for victims. A Vatican official said it is up to local church leaders to sanction priests who sexually abuse sisters.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because he wasn't authorized to speak on the issue, said the church has focused much of its attention on protecting children; but that vulnerable adults "deserve the same protection."

"Consecrated women have to be encouraged to speak up when they are molested," the official told AP. "Bishops have to be encouraged to take them seriously and make sure the priests are punished if guilty."

But being taken seriously is often the toughest obstacle for sisters who are sexually abused, said Demasure, until recently executive director of the church's Center for Child Protection at the Pontifical Gregorian University, the church's leading think tank on the issue.

"They (the priests) can always say 'she wanted it,'" Demasure said.

Demasure said many priests in Africa, for example, struggle with traditional and cultural beliefs in the importance of having children. Novices are particularly vulnerable because they often need a letter from their parish priest to be accepted into certain religious congregations.

"And sometimes they have to pay for that," she said.

And when these women become pregnant?

"Mainly, she has an abortion. Even more than once. And he pays for that. A religious sister has no money. A priest, yes," she said.

Jesus went beyond the walls; will you?

I grew up in New Hope Baptist Church, Route 2, Wauchula, Florida. Like many a Southerner, white and black, the walls of church were a comfort to me.

Clay Smith

For starters, the church was air-conditioned; our house was not. To step into the sanctuary from the blazing Florida heat was like stepping into grace. As a squirmy 4-year-old, I heard the preacher thunder that hell was hot, and I believed him; I had already survived four Florida summers. I made the connection early: Heaven was air-conditioned, just like church.

Church was not just like family; it was family. Just about everyone within those walls could trace his or her lineage back to where it crossed (or at least brushed up against) everyone else's. Out of boredom one Sunday, I decided to figure out who in the choir I wasn't related to. There was one person: the preacher's wife.

I loved the hymns we sang. "Love Lifted Me" was my favorite, maybe because of the chorus: "When nothing else could help, love lifted me!" Back then, people sang out, even people who couldn't carry a tune. A hundred fifty voices bouncing off those walls lifted your soul.

I remember sermons on missions. When Valda Long, a missionary to Nigeria — a native of our county — came to speak, everyone dug a little deeper in their pockets and pocketbooks to support her. However, we didn't have any sermons on witnessing that I remember. I guess we thought we didn't need them. We knew everyone who didn't go to church in the great Popash – Lemon Grove area. We figured they knew where the church was and what time we started (11 a.m., of course). Besides, we would pray for them during revival time and invite them to hear the guest preacher. We didn't see much need to go beyond the walls.

That world I grew up in is gone, even in Wauchula. I'm not sure it ever really existed. We could pretend it did when the United States had a "churched" culture. A "churched" culture is when everyone knows they are supposed to be in church, whether they go or not. A "churched" culture is when people believe the Bible is true ("The Bible says…"), even if they don't live by it. A "churched" culture is when everyone agrees on "right" and "wrong." All we had to do was stay in the walls of church and let people come to us.

There are still churches that try to live behind their walls. They build their own schools and their own fitness centers so people are able to stay in a church bubble. I know of some churches that even have their own restaurants. This is church as a fortress, inviting people to come and do life together, away from the dirt of the world.

Jesus, the one who is the head of the church, didn't spend a lot of time behind the walls. He was out with people. The more non-religious the people, the more he seemed to like them. Messy people didn't scare him. The religious establishment, the people behind the walls, were threatened by him. Ultimately, they killed him. No wonder Jesus went beyond the walls.

After Jesus' death and resurrection, he gave his disciples one final instruction: Go. He did not tell them to build walls to huddle behind. He did not even tell them to be a family. He told them to go.

New Hope Church, which I love, is still a place of comfort for me. The people of that church did and still do many things right. What we did not do in those days was "go." We wanted to stay behind the walls.

Church isn't church if it stays behind the walls; Jesus told us to go beyond them. Out beyond the walls, there are people who need to hear some good news. Out beyond the walls, there are people who need hope. Out beyond the walls, there are people who need to know that when nothing else will help, love will lift them. Out beyond the walls, there are people who need Jesus.

It is time for the church to go beyond the walls. Will you go?

Clay Smith is the lead pastor of Alice Drive Baptist Church in Sumter.

Trump team wants to roll back Obama-era mileage standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Trump administration on Thursday proposed weakening Obama-era mileage standards designed to make cars more fuel efficient and less polluting, a major rollback already being challenged in the courts by California and other states.

The administration also served notice that it wants to revoke states' longstanding authority to set their own, stricter mileage standards.

Easing requirements that cars be more fuel efficient should make them both cheaper and safer, getting vehicles with the latest safety developments in the hands of consumers, officials said.

It's got "everything to do with just trying to turn over the fleet ... and get more clean and safe cars on the road," EPA assistant administrator Bill Wehrum said.

The proposal would freeze U.S. mileage standards at 2020 levels, when the new vehicle fleet will be required to hit an average of 30 miles per gallon in real-world driving.

California Gov. Jerry Brown on Thursday called the Trump administration proposals "an assault on the health of Americans everywhere. Under his reckless scheme, motorists will pay more at the pump, get worse gas mileage and breathe dirtier air. California will fight this stupidity in every conceivable way possible."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cars travel on the Grand Central Parkway pass LaGuardia Airport in New York. The Trump administration has proposed rolling back tougher Obama-era gas mileage requirements that are set to take effect after 2020.

California and 16 other states filed suit over the fuel efficiency standards in May, anticipating the new regulation.

The Obama administration had planned to keep toughening fuel requirements through 2026, saying those and other regulations on vehicles would save 40,000 lives annually through cleaner air. The argument remained on the EPA's website Thursday.

According to Trump administration estimates, the Obama fuel efficiency standards would raise the price of vehicles by an average of $2,340. That would price many buyers out of the new-vehicle market, forcing them to drive older, less-safe vehicles that pollute more, the administration says.

Heidi King, deputy administrator of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, said the freeze would reduce highway deaths by 1,000 per year "by reducing these barriers that prevent consumers from getting into the newer, safer, cleaner, more fuel-efficient cars."

But private transportation experts say there are so many factors involved that the 1,000 lives saved figure is questionable. The affordability argument ignores thousands of dollars of savings in fuel costs for each driver over the life of a car, opponents of the rollbacks said.

While the administration supports freezing the mileage standards after 2020, it will seek public comment now on that proposal and a range of others, including leaving the tighter, Obama administration fuel standards in place.

President Donald Trump had directed the rethink of the mileage regulations, saying in March 2017, "If the standards threatened auto jobs, then common-sense changes" were needed. Auto jobs were not a major part of administration officials' case Thursday for the rollbacks.

California has had the authority under the half-century-old Clean Air Act to set its own mileage standards to combat its chronic smog problem.

More than a dozen states follow California's standards, amounting to about 40 percent of the country's new-vehicle market.

Automakers view the new proposal as a starting point for negotiations with California, with hopes of keeping one fuel efficiency standard for the entire nation.

It's costly for companies to design and build vehicles for California and states that follow its rules, and a different set for the rest of the country. Automakers have said they want improved efficiency but also want standards that account for the massive shift from cars to trucks and SUVs.

The Alliance of Automobile Manufacturers, a main industry group, said Thursday that the Trump proposal means it's time for negotiations to begin. "We urge California and the federal government to find a common sense solution that sets continued increases in vehicle efficiency standards while also meeting the needs of American drivers."

In 2012, when the standards were first adopted, cars were about 50 percent of new-vehicle sales. Now they're only about one-third, with less-efficient trucks and SUVS making up the rest.

BAG AND BAGGAGE

Some days our troubles seem so great that we long to pack our bags and run away. What we don't realize is that our troubles have a way of slipping into those bags and coming right along with us…no matter how far we travel. Our "baggage" can get so heavy that we can't carry it alone. Take a trip to your house of worship this week. Instead of running away from your troubles, try running toward God's waiting arms; He can help you with that excess baggage.

White House: Trump receives new letter from Kim Jong Un

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said Thursday that President Donald Trump received a new letter from North Korean leader Kim Jong Un following up on their Singapore summit. The correspondence came amid fresh concerns over Pyongyang's commitment to denuclearization.

Trump tweeted early Thursday his thanks to the North Korean leader "for your nice letter — I look forward to seeing you soon!"

The White House did not provide details on the specific content of the letter, which was received Wednesday. White House spokeswoman Sarah Huckabee Sanders said the correspondence was "aimed at following up on their meeting in Singapore and advancing the commitments made in the US-DPRK joint statement."

A second meeting between Trump and Kim has not been planned at this time, according to a person familiar with the process. The person was not authorized to speak publicly and spoke on condition of anonymity to describe internal planning.

TRUMP

KIM

Trump in his tweet expressed gratitude to Kim "for keeping your word" on the return of the remains of more than 50 American service members killed during the Korean War. Vice President Mike Pence and U.S. military leaders received the remains in Hawaii during a somber ceremony on Wednesday.

The latest letter from Kim arrived on the heels of concerns over North Korea's ballistic missile program and commitment to denuclearization. Senior Trump administration officials have urged patience, cautioning that the process of denuclearizing North Korea and removing the threat of its long-range missiles will take time.

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo was headed to an Asian security meeting in Singapore, where a meeting this weekend with North Korea's foreign minister is possible.

Trump has sought to show progress from his June 12 summit with Kim in Singapore. He said during a Tuesday rally in Tampa, Florida, that the U.S. was "doing well" with North Korea and noted the return of detained Americans and Pyongyang's ceasing of nuclear testing or missile tests. "A lot of good things are happening. No tests. No rockets flying. But we'll see what happens," Trump said.

U.S. officials have been closely watching North Korea's willingness to abandon its nuclear ambitions.

The Washington Post on Tuesday reported that U.S. intelligence officials suspect that North Korea is continuing to build new missiles in the same research facility that manufactured the country's ballistic missiles capable of reaching the United States.

The Post also reported that North Korean officials have talked about how they plan to deceive the U.S. about the size of their arsenal of missiles and nuclear warheads and facilities.

Hot air mass from Africa puts Europe under scorching heat, dust

MADRID (AP) — Hot air from Africa is bringing a new heatwave to Europe, prompting health warnings about Sahara Desert dust and exceptionally high temperatures that are forecast to peak at 116.6 Fahrenheit in some southern areas.

The torrid weather meant that public services were put on alert in Spain and Portugal. Temperatures were forecast to reach 111 Fahrenheit on Thursday in the Portuguese city of Evora and in the Spanish province of Badajoz.

A hot air mass was moving northward from Africa, authorities said, warning that the mercury could peak at 116.6 degrees this weekend in the southern Portuguese town of Beja.

Portuguese authorities issued a nationwide health warning, including for dust from the Sahara Desert. Warnings were also issued for 40 of Spain's 50 provinces.

Up north in Sweden, the country's official tallest point is set to change amid record temperatures.

Scientists said a glacier on Mount Kebne, the Scandinavian country's highest peak at 6,925 feet, is no longer Sweden's tallest point after 10 inches melted.

Gunhild Rosqvist, a Stockholm University professor in geography, said the glacier lost 13 feet, 2 1/2 inches of snow in July alone as Sweden endured record temperatures that triggered dozens of wildfires, even in the Arctic Circle.

In neighboring Finland, a supermarket came up with a novel way of escaping the heat. The K-Supermarket said on its Facebook page that patrons hoping to cool down could sleep overnight in its air-conditioned store in Helsinki.

Homes in Finland are designed to handle the extreme cold and damp typical of the Nordic region, not the recent high temperatures.

In eastern Europe, Poland endured unusually high temperatures up to 93.2 Fahrenheit, forcing its power plants to go into emergency mode to increase output due to the wide use of air conditioning and electric fans.

In the streets of Warsaw, the Polish capital, authorities placed cooling water installations around and advised people to stay indoors. Dozens of the country's Baltic Sea beaches have "no swimming" warnings due to health risks from algae blooms.

Farmers across the continent were battling the effects of drought, so the European Union offered to speed up funds to help them cope. German farmers have already asked their government for $1.17 billion in financial aid to help cover losses from this year's poor harvest.

Wolverines team now has updated locker room

Principal thanks those who donated to project

BY SHARRON HALEY
Special to The Sumter Item

TURBEVILLE — East Clarendon's Lady Wolverines will no longer need to share a locker room with their opponents thanks to the vision of former East Clarendon High School Principal Dwayne Howell and ECHS alumni Donald Hardy and the generosity of the community.

"We couldn't have done this alone," Howell said this past week as he stood in the middle of the EC girls' new locker room. "We still have a couple of projects before we're finished."

"The lockers are made of oak, so they'll be very durable," Hardy said Tuesday afternoon. "The lockers were also installed so that they could be moved."

Howell and Hardy thanked the community and alumni of EC for their donations that made the project possible.

"Without Mr. Blake Gibbons at The Citizens Bank and Mr. Sparrow at Sparrow and Kennedy and many others from the community we wouldn't have had the funds to complete the project," Howell said. "We're truly blessed to have these people in our community, and we want to thank them for all that they do for East Clarendon."

SHARRON HALEY / SPECIAL TO THE SUMTER ITEM

Donald Hardy, Blake Gibbons and Dwayne Howell are seen in the newly renovated girls' locker room at East Clarendon High School. The Citizens Bank of Turbeville, where Gibbons serves as president and chief operating officer, was one of several local businesses that made generous contributions toward the renovation project.

In just five months, the project went from simply being a vision to almost completion.

"We have a few more projects," Howell added. "We want to do some more things to the boys' locker room, and we may do some more painting and small projects, but the bulk of the renovations are complete."

According to EC Athletic Director Scott Cook, the locker rooms were outdated and in need of an upgrade when Howell and Hardy took on the project.

"We're a small school," Cook said. "We depend a lot on the generosity of our community. We're grateful for all the help we receive."

As Howell and Hardy walked around the newly completed Lady Wolverines' locker room, the pair commented on small additions that complemented the project.

"I think the chalkboard really makes this place a locker room," Howell added. "Although the lockers are mounted to the walls, they can be moved to add more lockers or to rearrange the room."

The original locker rooms were built in the mid-1950s and were due for an overhaul, Hardy said.

"We want these girls to be proud of their facilities," he said. "We wanted them to have a place they didn't have to share, and I believe we've accomplished that."

Howell added that he and Hardy aren't quite finished with projects they would like to see completed at the school, but finances will play a major role in how much more they can do.

If anyone would like to make a donation to the project or to the school's athletic program, please give the school a call at (843) 659-2187. Please note on your checks whether the donation is for the renovation project or for the athletic program.

Mom worries nonstop as daughter leaves for school

Dear Abby
ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY — I'm the proud mom of a wonderful 21-year-old daughter whom I find myself worrying about more and more lately. She just graduated from our local college and is heading to medical school in another state six hours away.

Rationally, I know she'll be fine and can take care of herself, but I am terrified that something will happen to her and I won't be there. My husband and daughter keep telling me nothing will happen and I need to calm down.

My question is, how do I go about staying calm when there is danger everywhere? She's our only child. Aren't my fears justified? Or am I overreacting like they keep telling me?

Worried mom in Alabama

DEAR WORRIED MOM — You are overreacting. Many parents experience the fears you are having to some degree when their child leaves home. For many of them, it happens when the child boards the school bus at the age of 6. For others it happens when their young adult leaves for college.

While tragedies do sometimes occur, they can happen when a parent is present as well as when their child is absent. These incidents are magnified when they dominate the news cycle. If you are unable to control your anxiety, a licensed therapist may be able to help you regain your balance.

DEAR ABBY — Recently I've noticed more people saying "Excuse you" instead of "Excuse me" if someone is in their way. I consider it very rude, since the person being addressed often has no idea he or she is in the way before something is said. What's an appropriate response when someone says "Excuse you"?

Excuse me in the Midwest

DEAR EXCUSE ME — This is what I would say: "Excuse me? Excuse YOU! If you need to get by, all you have to do is ask politely."

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Discovery, Netflix both stick to tried, true formula

BY KEVIN McDONOUGH

When does formula become parody? "Mad Dog Made" (10 p.m., TV-PG) represents the latest in the Discovery network's slate of super-duper tough guy programming. Its subject and titular star adheres so closely to the network's template that the show almost seems like a spoof. Just describing it seems like a random word salad of testosterone-drenched nouns and adjectives. For starters, host Kevin McClung calls himself "Mad Dog."

His expertise? Building customized weapons. We see him crafting and forging knives, high-powered rifles and handheld killing machines. When not in his shop building stuff, he's out in the field, blowing things up. One of his specialties is a long rifle designed to take down rockets. Think that makes for loud and explosive footage?

His daughter Morgan has been hanging out in his workshop since she could walk. Now she helps out her dad and offers a fetching comic foil for the crusty old man. It's strictly a "look but don't touch" situation for the young dudes in Mad Dog's orbit. Who wants to tangle with an angry dad who builds tactical fire axes in his workshop?

And as if this weren't macho enough, a soundtrack of throbbing generic thrash metal music completes the picture. Help yourself.

• Discovery isn't the only outlet relying on formula or playing with daddy-daughter themes. Kristen Bell and Kelsey Grammer star in the odd 2018 romantic comedy "Like Father" (TV-MA), streaming today on Netflix.

Bell plays a workaholic bride left at the altar who then has to contend with the presence of her estranged father (Grammer) at her wedding. In the logic of such movies, they go out drinking, pass out, wake up awkwardly and then decide to embark together on the cruise intended for her honeymoon.

EMILY ARAGONES / NETFLIX

Like a lot of Netflix products, "Like Father" all but depends on its audience's nostalgia for the familiar. Remember the 2008 comedy "Forgetting Sarah Marshall," which paired Kristen Bell with "Freaks and Geeks" star Jason Segel? He's not here, so Seth Rogen will have to do.

The casting of Bell and Grammer echoes her pairing in the NBC comedy "The Good Place" with Grammer's "Cheers" co-star Ted Danson. It's hard to churn out as much "new" Netflix programming without echoing the tried and true.

Speaking of keeping it very familiar, "Like Father" is directed, written and produced by Lauren Miller Rogen, Seth Rogen's wife.

• Blending dance, experimental filmmaking, animation and comedy, artist Terence Nance presents a series of sketches and vignettes exploring society at its most beautiful and debased on the new series "Random Acts of Flyness" (midnight, HBO, TV-MA).

TONIGHT'S OTHER HIGHLIGHTS

• The team confronts Conor Devlin on the series finale of "Quantico" (8 p.m., ABC, TV-14).

• A newborn raises questions of culture, ritual and morality on "The Orville" (8 p.m., Fox, r, TV-14).

• A deranged curator (Lionel Atwill) targets his next work of art (Fay Wray) in the 1933 thriller "The Mystery of the Wax Museum" (8 p.m., TCM).

• John Quinones hosts "What Would You Do?" (9 p.m., ABC).

• A race against the clock on "Blue Bloods" (10 p.m., CBS, r, TV-14).

• Stand-up artists perform on "Kevin Hart Presents: The Next Level" (11 p.m., Comedy Central, TV-MA).

• Featuring a who's who of celebrity voices from Jason Alexander to Reese Witherspoon, "Animals" (11:30 p.m., HBO, TV-MA), a cartoon series by Mark and Jay Duplass about angst-ridden urban critters, returns for a third season.

National Geographic documents 'Yellowstone Live'

BY KEVIN McDONOUGH

From the time of Ed Sullivan, Sunday nights have been the home of the "really big show." Series don't come bigger or more ambitious than "Yellowstone Live" (9 p.m., National Geographic). A crew of 200 professionals and 34 camera teams will document life in Yellowstone National Park over four nights. And the broadcast will unfold live.

In many ways, this is a combination of those static popular nature cams that focus on a single bird's nest for months at a time with an ambitious television event, a production rivaling "The Amazing Race," or sports and Olympics coverage.

While some may say that this is a National Geographic take on reality television, that would not be completely accurate. From the time of "The Real World" on, reality television has depended almost entirely on the editing process to goose drama and controversy from hundreds of hours of tedious footage. While unscripted, reality television relies heavily on post-production to create the illusion of dramatic narrative. "Yellowstone Live" depends on nature itself to provide the fireworks.

Featured "performers" and expected guest stars include migrating elk, stealth wolf packs and 600-pound grizzlies. In addition to wide-screen coverage of the gorgeous flora and fauna, a "Magma Cam" will report on the park's geothermal activity. Aerial drones and cameras will track action in remote areas and a camera will be "embedded" inside a beaver lodge.

While the impressive logistics behind "Yellowstone Live" suggest comparisons to sports coverage, some viewers may recall a time when millions around the globe glued themselves to ongoing reports of space launches and manned trips into Earth's orbit and to the moon itself. In some ways, "Yellowstone" represents a voyage to a very exotic planet — our own.

• ABC offers viewers a chance to revisit "The Good Doctor" (8 p.m. Saturday, r, TV-14) before it returns for a second season on Sept. 24.

For those unfamiliar with the show, "Good" is based on a South Korean series. It stars Freddie Highmore as Shaun Murphy, a savant on the autism spectrum who becomes a surgical resident at San Jose St. Bonaventure Hospital.

Much is made about the risks of hiring someone with his social skills, but not only does he prove particularly insightful as a doctor-in-training, he also inspires his workaholic colleagues to look at their lives and their actions from a fresh perspective.

Unabashedly feel-good, the series was a ratings standout. Like NBC's "This Is Us" the year before, this medical series became appointment TV for many viewers and a rare phenomenon for network television, a popular stand-alone drama that wasn't a spin-off, a part of a franchise or a reality spectacle.

Given its status, I'm surprised ABC hasn't made it more available for viewers. Some decades back, CBS turned a modest hit called "NCIS" into a ratings blockbuster by airing it repeatedly during the summer. Too often, networks use the summer — and Saturdays in particular — to "burn off" series that have failed rather than promote what few hits they have.

• "Cold Justice" (6 p.m. Saturday, Oxygen, TV-14) returns for a fifth season. Created by Dick Wolf, this unscripted series features former prosecutor Kelly Siegler, whose team of investigators revisits cold cases with the cooperation of local agencies.

Originally developed for, and canceled by, TNT, "Cold" moved to Oxygen in 2017. Hardly the first nonfiction series to examine such cases, "Cold" was notable for its association with Wolf, whose "Law & Order" empire has churned out many scripted hours of television and kept many actors employed.

• The fourth installment of the epic documentary series "Planet Earth: South Pacific" (9 p.m. Saturday, BBC America, TV-G) explores island volcanoes, underwater eruptions and the millions of years of geologic activity that shaped the vast ocean.

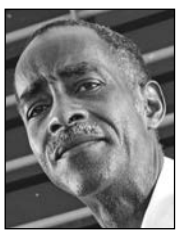
COMMENTARY

With technology, we've lost control of our prisons

My name is Robert Johnson; many of you know me as the correctional captain shot six times in the chest and abdominal areas on the order of inmates. I have traveled to many parts of this country giving talks to police organizations, new FBI agents, churches and civic groups. Anywhere I can get a platform or a mic in front of my big mouth.

We live in a rapidly changing and evolving world. Whether we like it or not, technology has reached its tentacles into every part of our daily lives, even into places we do not need its encroachment. It has reached prison and is running out of control. It will cost us dearly to regain control. I think the cellphone is one of the most technological advances of our modern age. Ever since this wonder obtained a toehold in the life of locked-up criminals, it has become a necessary tool for the criminal mastermind, and they will fight to keep it. Just think of the many things your cellphone can perform. Well, they have some of the same phones with the same capabilities. The cellphone is a weapon of mass destruction (WMD) in the hands of locked-up criminals. It gives them capabilities far beyond what they normally could do.



Capt. Robert Johnson

During my time with the Department of Corrections (DOC), I was kicked, punched, knocked out, had a homemade knife pulled on me and shot six times with a .38 revolver, and each time, inmates with cellphones were involved. These cellphones are not primarily being used to call mother dear or grandma. The main use for these phones by locked-up criminals is to enable them to continue their criminal activity. Cellphones have been used to help inmates escape and are being used now to plan an escape. Cellphones were used in the planning and execution of the DOC director of Colorado.

These inmates literally have a cellphone directive of other inmates serving time in other statewide facilities, the federal system and other states. They reach out to each other and compare notes on what system works best in carrying out their evil plans. Just as movers and shakers network, so do the inmates.

Many of you have been contacted by people you think are telemarketers, policemen, IRS agents and bankers, but in actuality many of them are inmates using cellphones. Their intentions are to take every dollar they can scam out of you. They will try to convince you to buy a Green Dot Master or Visa card, which is a reloadable credit card. There is no limit to the amount of money that can be placed on these cards. I know of an inmate who had $85,000 on his card. Inmates have used these cards and cellphone(s) to buy homes, furniture, steel appliances, cars, pay rent for their girlfriends and families, run drug organizations from California to here, pay for hits on people ($6,000 for the hit on me), plan riots and work stoppages. Inmates have stolen money from the IRS by submitting phony tax forms and W2s for $5,000 or less in refunds, and if only one or two of the 10 submitted are paid, he and his accomplices are still ahead of the game. That same inmate told me he knew the IRS has a $5,000 threshold for audits.

The cellphone is an advanced technology, and it will take another advanced technology to fully defeat it, and that costs money. We can pay for the technology to defeat them or pay medical bills. I saw one bill from one of the hospitals that treated me, and it was almost $1 million. I have had to stay in seven different hospitals in five different counties, with more to come. My medical care, which you have had to pay for through workers' comp, would have paid for the installation and upkeep of a number of these systems at a few prisons.

One more thing. There are some, not many, prison staff members who are working for the inmates. They help them obtain cellphones, drugs and other contraband. These people need to go to jail, even if only for six months. They should not be eligible for probation until they have served some time. When I was working at the DOC, one correctional officer we caught working for the inmates told me he made over $50,000. The judge gave him no jail time, only probation. Probation is not a deterrence when dealing with the kind of money inmates can pay. I sat in on a trial where a lieutenant and sergeant were running a drug ring in the prison, and when they got caught, the judge only gave them probation. Those corrupt staff who want to work for the inmates must face real jail time. They are supposed to be the keepers, not helpers. Let your state representatives and senators know you want the laws changed.

It is up to us to take back the prison. If not, it will get far worse. Not every locked-up criminal is dumb. Law enforcement had to outsmart them. I have talked to doctors, lawyers, millionaires, a nuclear engineer, many very smart people, all serving time. All that brain power in one small place, now throw in cellphones and it is a recipe for disaster.

Editor's note: Robert Johnson of Sumter is a retired Department of Corrections captain who spent 15 years as a corrections officer at Lee Correctional Institution. Seven inmates died in a riot at Lee Correctional in April that began as part of a turf war between gangs over territory, money and contraband items such as drugs and cellphones.

Trump's decisions can affect South Carolina

We've heard the phrase "a New York minute" used to describe time passing quickly. Today, we may need to coin the term "a Trump minute" since time is moving faster than ever before.

It seems like months since the G7 Summit, NATO meeting, North Korea summit, European tour and most recently the Helsinki bilateral with Russian Federation President Vladimir Putin, but they've all happened in the last 45 days.

Trump's summer abroad, appearing to be in a rush to negotiate new terms for trade and international relations, surely does not impact the average American's daily life — unless they spend their days glued to cable news channels or the swinging stock market.

However, in Aiken County there are lives and livelihoods clinging to every second and tick-tock of a Trump minute. What's happening internationally and in D.C. has a real impact on the CSRA.

As NATO's weapons powerhouse, the U.S. diplomatic team, led by President Trump, casts doubt at the G7 among world leaders about the United States' unwavering support for its allies and budding interest toward Russia. Was Trump using his lauded deal-making skills to solidify advantages for the U.S. or was there a nuclear-powered motive?

As a community nestled near several metric tons of plutonium, a leading cyber security facility at Fort Gordon and ongoing questions about our citizens' roles in constructing the cores of nuclear weapons for the National Nuclear Security Administration and the Department of Energy, we're hoping there's more to this deal.

Perpetual missions at the Savannah River Site will mean more jobs for national defense at the Savannah River Site and more money pumped into the economy of Aiken County.

The U.S. and Russia jointly agreed to dispose of weapons-grade plutonium in the 2000s era. That pact has been suspended and currently sits in limbo. The weapons-grade plutonium in question is enough to create thousands of nuclear weapons.

The MOX (mixed oxide) Fuel Fabrication Facility at SRS is a product of that pact.

White House Press Secretary Sarah Sanders expressed President Trump's desire to try a friendly approach with the eastern comrades: "Ninety percent of the world's nuclear weapons are under the direction of the United States and Russia," and, "it's a good thing to get along with the other person that controls that much of nuclear arsenal across the globe."

Perspectives change with every Trump minute. Three minutes ago, we learned Fort Gordon deployed an intelligence group to an undisclosed location on a mission; two minutes ago, the U.S. government decided to cease the construction of the MOX facility at SRS with now-jeopardized disposition options; and one minute ago, we learned that the two men controlling 90 percent of the nuclear weapons on the planet met privately for two hours.

Time flies, and no one has time for conspiracy theories, but we could all use transparency.

Despite foundation report, tax holiday welcomed by shoppers

The critics include reputable sources such as the Tax Foundation, which does research on taxation on the federal, state and local levels.

The foundation says sales tax holidays such as South Carolina's this weekend are poor policy, costing states revenue while providing little benefit.

More policymakers are recognizing this less-than-desirable tradeoff, the foundation says. South Carolina is one of 17 states to use sales tax holidays in 2018, up one from 2017 but down from a peak of 19 states in 2010.

Findings of a Tax Foundation report from 2017:

• Sales tax holidays create additional tax compliance costs, but larger businesses tend to lobby for the holidays as a form of free advertising.

• Most sales tax holidays involve politicians picking products and industries to favor with exemptions, arbitrarily discriminating among products and across time and distorting consumer decisions.

• While sales taxes are somewhat regressive, this does not make sales tax holidays an effective tool for providing relief to low-income individuals. In order to give a small amount of tax savings to those with lower incomes, holidays give a large amount of savings to higher-income groups as well.

• Political gimmicks like sales tax holidays distract policymakers and taxpayers from genuine, permanent tax relief. If a state must offer a "holiday" from its tax system, it is an implicit recognition that the state's tax system is uncompetitive. If policymakers want to save money for consumers, then they should cut the sales tax rate year-round.

While many may agree that sales taxes are due an examination and the state's system has issues, they will not buy into the negative aspects of the tax holiday for back-to-school purchases.

There are good reasons locally for both buyer and seller to support the tax-free weekend.

Orangeburg is hungry for industrial development that will bring jobs — and is equally primed to see business growth in the retail and restaurant sectors.

Census numbers that are so critical to development decisions made by firms which have thousands upon thousands of choices in places to locate do not adequately tell the local story. The micropolitan area of which the City of Orangeburg is at the center is surrounded by a large county and surrounding counties that will support more business if given the opportunity.

One way people locally can boost the marketing effort is shopping at home. Successful retailers and restaurants are themselves a marketing tool. This tax-free weekend brings an opportunity to shop at home for one of the busiest retail periods of the year.

During the sales tax holiday, shoppers benefit from the exemption of the 6 percent state sales tax and local taxes on the purchase of school supplies.

To understand how important the weekend is for retailers, consider that the tax-free weekend has become the third-busiest shopping period of the year, surpassed only by the weekends after Thanksgiving and before Christmas.

Parents will go back-to-school shopping regardless, but the tax holiday attracts cash-strapped shoppers who have delayed purchases.

And even if you don't need school clothes, you can save money shopping during the sales-tax holiday. And you can find some great deals.

South Carolina shoppers typically save approximately $2-3 million over the course of the tax-free weekend. While larger markets such as Columbia and Charleston will get their share of the business, it is vital for the prospects of growth in Orangeburg and The T&D Region that local people prove businesses here can thrive.

It makes sense to spend money locally, where the economic growth promoted by the dollars will directly benefit quality of life. The boost in sales this weekend is important for retailers, and the savings are welcomed by shoppers.

FIRING FROM PAGE A1

Williams with the South Carolina Municipal Association gave the Manning Police Department a 100 percent rating on its policies and procedures.

"That directly contradicts what the mayor said about my performance as police chief," Shaffer said.

Shaffer also questioned the manner in which city officials held and ultimately passed the first reading of an ordinance that gave the PSC the authority to fire employees, a point in this saga that The Sumter Item has also raised concerns about possibly violating state Freedom of Information Act laws.

Shaffer said while Tanner was going over the city's budget in council's June 5 budget meeting that Nelson received a call and left the room. Shaffer said shortly after that, Councilman Clayton Pack received a call and went downstairs. Shortly after they returned to council chambers, council members voted to go into executive session, he said.

Shaffer added that all the department heads that were present for the budget workshop left, and he remained in the upstairs conference room. Shaffer said that approximately three hours later, Tanner told him the meeting was over and that he could leave.

"When was this discussed?" he asked. "The city did not follow its own rules."

Shaffer said he questioned the legality of the discussion because council members did not specify what they were discussing and did not identify which ordinance they were changing.

"There was no mention of Ordinance 2018-04 that gave the mayor and committee the authority to fire me," he added. "If there was no first reading, they couldn't have had a second reading. It's an unlawful termination by the mayor and the Public Service Committee.

"The proper procedures were not adhered to."

Shaffer said, "Her statement compared to the minutes don't match up."

Shaffer also told the committee that it wasn't until the second reading of Ordinance 2018-04 that the title of the ordinance appeared on the agenda.

Shaffer said one department head told him they were not made aware of the Public Safety Committee's authority until after he was fired.

At this time during Shaffer's testimony before the committee, Tanner, Nelson and the Public Safety Committee's attorney Kenneth Davis were witnessed by a member of the audience typing into their cellphones.

Shaffer said his firing was "retaliation by the mayor against me."

Shaffer said he met with the PSC in April concerning an officer; however, the concerns "did not warrant action against the officers."

Shaffer told the committee he was having problems with an officer from May 17 until May 23, involving the officer's dishonesty, insubordination to supervisors, false statements, access to video using another officer's password and lying to the police chief about the matter.

"I wanted to terminate (the officer) via policy," Shaffer added.

Shaffer said he took his recommendations to Tanner, who did not agree with his assessment.

"I was not allowed to terminate an officer who clearly violated policy," Shaffer added. "(That officer) lied to me on May 23."

Shaffer told the committee that the problems between city officials and his office began as early as May and involved a traffic stop on Easter.

"The officer did not break (any laws)," Shaffer said. "The mayor asked me to look into the matter. She presented a statement from the person. I (was) suspicious about the statement."

Shaffer said he told the committee that he was responsible for his department and that he wanted to make sure the letter was from the person who made the statement.

"She (the mayor) told me to stand down," Shaffer added.

Shaffer admitted to the committee that he contacted the person involved in the Easter incident.

"I went to that person (and was told that) someone else wrote it," Shaffer told the committee. "He did not write it. The statement the mayor gave me was a false statement."

According to Shaffer, Tanner said, "This is over. The police department does not need to look into the matter anymore."

"The mayor gave me a false statement, and now I'm not to look into the statement anymore," Shaffer added.

Shaffer also told the committee that Nelson told him she had a statement from an officer concerning misconduct. He said when he asked for a copy of the letter, he was denied.

Shaffer said Nelson told him several of his officers came to her because they were "scared of me" because he raised his voice, could fire them or write them up.

Shaffer said Nelson refused to name the officers or any situations to which they were referring.

"She told me to 'Fix it,'" Shaffer said.

Shaffer admitted to the committee that voices were raised during this time because he was being falsely accused and unable to face his accusers.

Shaffer said that prior to his termination, the members of the PSC asked attorneys with the Boykin and Davis Law Firm to investigate the police department and return their finding to the committee.

"To this day," Shaffer said, "(I was terminated, and) I have no clue what they found."

"The mayor was looking for a reason to fire me," he added. "Nothing was disclosed. (There was the) creation of an illegal ordinance to fire me."

He said he remembers the mayor telling him during an exchange on May 29, "I am looking at your face and can tell there are discrepancies."

"Are you calling me a liar?" Shaffer said he asked.

Shaffer said at this time, Pack told him, "No the mayor is not calling you a liar."

Shaffer referred a second time to the time period of May 17 through May 23 when he had disciplinary issues involving a particular police officer.

Shaffer said that in May, Statute 23-23-150 was signed into law that required any police chiefs or sheriffs to report any misconduct issues involving officers to the South Carolina Criminal Justice Academy within 15 days.

Shaffer said he met with Tanner and an attorney with Boykin and Davis and disclosed the new statute requirements to them.

On the day before he planned to submit the paperwork pertaining to misconduct by the police officer, he was fired, Shaffer told the committee.

In closing, Shaffer told the committee that during his tenure with the Manning Police Department, he was "never counseled, never written up, never suspended. They never came to me about any issues about raising my voice."

Shaffer said that prior to receiving the termination letter from Nelson, at no time was he called concerning the issues stated in the PSC letter.

Shaffer said his firing was "not good for the city."

Shaffer said he was fired as a result of a "personal retaliation against me and to keep me from following state law."

Shaffer asked the committee to have his pay, benefits and retirement compensation reinstated per the grievance process.

"I'm asking you to decide I was wrongfully terminated and unlawfully terminated," Shaffer told the committee.

In his rebuttal to Shaffer's comments, Tanner told the committee that they were not responsible for determining the legality of any ordinance that was created.

"Your task is not to determine policy," he said. "Your task is to decide if his termination was warranted or not warranted."

Tanner also told the committee that the letter Shaffer referred to in his presentation was a "statement from the mother of her son."

Tanner told Shaffer that "some good things happened while you were here" but that the committee should consider the reasons behind his firing.

After a brief meeting in executive session, the Grievance Committee told both parties they wanted to review the information and would reconvene at 4 p.m. Aug 6.

Manning City Councilman Ervin Davis Sr. was asked to leave Shaffer's grievance hearing Thursday morning by one of the attorneys for the city's Public Safety Committee, Kenneth Davis.

"As soon as I walked into the room, Mr. Davis came up to me and asked me to walk out the room," Councilman Davis said Thursday afternoon. "He told me that if I stayed in the hearing that my vote on the Grievance Committee's recommendation to council on Blair's termination may be challenged."

"If I had known that Mayor Julia Nelson was in the room, I'd have stayed," Councilman Davis said. "When the vote comes to council, she should recuse herself if the vote is tied."

Their senior seasons have yet to begin, but three Sumter area high school football players have made decisions on where they want to play the game in college.

Zion Nelson and Tayvian Gass, both offensive linemen from Sumter High School, and Malik Richardson, a quarterback/wide receiver/defensive back from Lakewood High, committed to Appalachian State University, Wofford College and East Carolina University, respectively.

Sumter High School football head coach Mark Barnes had nothing but praise for his two standout linemen.

Muschamp's focus on now, not last year's turnaround success

BY PETE IACOBELLI
The Associated Press

COLUMBIA — For South Carolina coach Will Muschamp, it's time to prove it all again.

No more does he want to talk about the Gamecocks' turnaround 9-4 season a year ago — their most since going 11-2 in 2013 — or how strong the team looked in rallying past Michigan in the second half to win the Outback Bowl last January.

"We understand we've got to have is a buy-in from this football, understand it's going to be a difficult, physical camp, a violent camp and that's what you've got to do to be successful," Muschamp, the third-year coach, said Thursday.

Muschamp knows too well the land mines that can show up in year three.

Clemson No. 2 in coaches poll; Carolina just outside top 25

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Clemson will enter the 2018 campaign ranked No. 2 in the nation behind defending national champion Alabama, according to the preseason Coaches Poll released by USA Today on Thursday, while South Carolina is knocking on the door of the top 25..

Clemson, which played in the College Football Playoff for the third consecutive year last season, is sandwiched between Alabama and Ohio State. Georgia, which lost to Alabama in the national championship contest, is No. 4.

South Carolina, coming off a 9-4 season, is the first team listed as receiving votes. Oklahoma State is No. 25 with 168 votes. The Gamecocks are next with 138.

The ranking marks Clemson's third consecutive top 5 preseason Coaches Poll ranking, a first in program history. The Tigers have exceeded their preseason Coaches Poll ranking in each of the last seven seasons.

The 2018 squad joins the 1982 (No. 9), 1984 (8), 1988 (4), 2008 (9), 2013 (8), 2016 (2) and 2017 (5) squads as one of eight Clemson teams to enter the year in the Coaches Poll preseason top 10.

At 66, Turner relishes return to coaching with Panthers

BY STEVE REED
The Associated Press

SPARTANBURG — Norv Turner easily could have opted to keep traveling the world with his wife, writing country music songs and playing with his grandchildren.

At 66, who would have blamed him?

Instead, Turner decided to return for a 33rd season of NFL coaching as offensive coordinator of the Carolina Panthers.

Turner, who won two Super Bowls as a coordinator with the Dallas Cowboys in the early 1990s, wasn't necessarily looking to return to coaching after sitting out last season. But when approached about the Panthers' job opening, Turner couldn't resist the chance to reunite with head coach Ron Rivera — Turner's assistant for four seasons when he was head coach of the San Diego Chargers.

TURNER

He's also joining his son, Panthers quarterbacks coach Scott Turner, and has the opportunity to coach a "talented group" of players that includes 2015 league MVP quarterback Cam Newton.

"It's a unique situation," Turner said.

Turner joins a team that has his fingerprints all over it.

When Rivera was hired by the Panthers in 2011 — also Newton's rookie season — he brought in Turner understudy Rob Chudzinski as his offensive coordinator. And when Mike Shula took over when Chudzinski left to coach the Cleveland Browns, many of Turner's play calls remained. So it's not like Turner is starting anew.

But he does have some new ideas.

"We are trying to build a complete offense and that will include things they have done here and it will include things they haven't done here," said Turner without elaborating on specifics.

Newton said the onus has been on Turner "to take what we have done good and expand on it, rather than just ripping the sheets of paper up and having a this-is-my-way-or-the-highway mentality."

So far the two say they've bonded well.

Turner was familiar with Newton because Scott worked with him during his first two seasons with the Panthers in his first stint as quarterbacks coach.

Turner said he likes the way Newton sees the entire field, but that his goal is to improve the quarterback's decision-making skills.

"We want to make sure we get all of our eligible receivers involved," Turner said.

Turner also wants to see Newton's career 58.1 completion percentage increase significantly, something Newton has already said he's eager to work on.

"That has to be my mentality," Newton said . "We have a lot of guys who can take two yards and turn it into 20 yards, or more. But it starts with me and I have to trust those guys and get the ball to them."

The Panthers talked last season about limiting the wear and tear on Newton's body after undergoing rotator cuff surgery in March 2017 by cutting down on his running.

Newton is 29 and entering his eighth NFL season.

But Turner put no restrictions on Newton, Carolina's leading rusher last season and the NFL's all-time leader in touchdowns rushing by a quarterback, when he spoke after practice Thursday.

"Zion is a steady player; he has great feet and athletic ability," Barnes said. "He's a consistently good blocker and a great student."

Nelson thinks Appalachian State is a great fit for him.

"It's a really nice school, I like the location and I want to win games," Nelson said at the first The Sumter Item Media Day on Wednesday. "I think App State will make me the best player I can be."

Nelson also shared what it takes to be a good offensive lineman.

"Be aggressive," Nelson said. "Also, be under control and know what you're doing."

Nelson credits Barnes with helping him be successful.

"Coach Barnes won't let you slack off," Nelson said. "He'll make sure you're in the position you need to be to win."

Gass is also a key contributor.

"He was on varsity his sophomore year and a starter last year," Barnes said. "He has good feet and the ability to knock people off the football."

Barnes also had a lot to say about his players off the field.

"Both guys have high character and will do a great job representing the Sumter community at their universities," Barnes said.

Gass also had offers from South Carolina State, Tennessee Tech and North Greenville, as well as a few other schools. He plays offensive tackle, guard, and center when needed.

"I had a big body as a freshman," Gass said. "My coaches helped me use my big body and gain strength."

Gass and Nelson have a very good relationship on the offensive line.

"He's my OT bro; we compete and discuss calls," Gass said. "The whole line competes with one another and is very close. I believe in the chemistry it takes to be a great offensive line."

Lakewood also boasts a dynamic player. Richardson had nine offers, all of them except one being Division I. These schools included East Carolina, Wofford, Furman University, Coastal Carolina University, Western Carolina University, The Citadel, Georgia Southern University and North Greenville University. These were mix and match offers; some schools wanted him for different positions. Richardson ultimately chose East Carolina.

"He's a great young man, his parents did right," Lakewood head coach Larry Cornelius said. "He has discipline, and he has over a 3.0 GPA (grade-point average) in school."

Cornelius loves Richardson's versatility.

"It doesn't matter where he plays, he just wants to help the team," Cornelius said. "He has God-given talent, and he's exemplifying that at Lakewood."

For his junior season and his first under Cornelius, Richardson completed 85 of 165 passes for 907 yards and seven touchdowns versus seven interceptions. He also led the Gators in rushing with 769 yards and eight touchdowns on 132 carries. He rushed for over 100 yards in two games as well.

"I wanted to make my commitment before the season," Richardson said. "I felt more wanted as a person and player at ECU. I had four or five coaches from the staff calling me and checking in on me a day."

Richardson also likes ECU head coach Scottie Montgomery. Richardson said he will play wherever he fits best with the Pirates.

For now, Richardson continues to improve his game both physically and mentally.

"I had to get my mind right," Richardson said. "I'm more confident and my throwing has improved thanks to my quarterback coach (Bren Maloney)."

He was coming off an 11-2 season at Florida, his only other head-coaching stop, in 2012 with sky-high expectations. Instead, the Gators stumbled to a 4-8 mark the following year. Muschamp was let go before the end of 2014.

Muschamp has reminded his players ever since not to sit still or be satisfied with their burst of respectability last fall.

"It was a good season, but everyone wanted more," said linebacker T.J. Brunson, South Carolina's leading returning tackler. "I feel like you don't want more, you're wasting your time."

There will be little wasted time once the Gamecocks hold their first practice Friday. The season begins Sept. 1 at home against in-state opponent Coastal Carolina. The Southeastern Conference season opens the following week against league champion and national runner up Georgia.

Receiver Bryan Edwards, who led the team with 64 catches for 793 yards and five touchdowns, said last year's wins were nice and provided the Gamecocks a springboard to off-season workouts.

"We get a taste of that success, but we haven't had any real success yet," he said. "It makes us go harder. It makes us more hungry."

Muschamp said the focus on this year began at year's start when Gamecocks and their fans were still giddy about coming from 19-3 down in the final 20 minutes to defeat the Wolverines 26-19.

Muschamp sees the steps forward that have occurred the first two years. He also knows those who dwell on history often get stuck in it.

So he wants players engaged and concentrating only on practice and improving, day by day and play by play.

"Those are all things to me that good teams have," Muschamp said. "Good teams understand how to compete, how to practice the right way. All those things to me are important to the kind of team you want to have."

It's almost like the players can hear Muschamp's voice in their heads whenever they want to gloat about last year, laughs Edwards. The message, while pervasive, has sunk in.

"We hear it every day. And when you think about it, we haven't really done anything. What's nine wins. Our team goals are to win the (SEC) East, win the state (over Clemson) and compete for a national championship," Edwards said. "That's what we want to do."

Muschamp took his own steps to ensure a different outcome in his third season at South Carolina than at Florida. He let go of offensive coordinator and quarterbacks coach Kurt Roper before the bowl game and elevated receivers coach Bryan McClendon to lead a faster, more dynamic attack.

Muschamp also hired respected quarterbacks coach Dan Werner, who helped run the Ole Miss offense from 2012-16 and spent last season as an analyst for Alabama coach Nick Saban.

"We've made progress," Muschamp said. "I'm excited about this football team. I see a lot of the intangible qualities that you need to have a good team. Does that mean we're going to have a good team? No. We need to have a good training camp and that's what we're focused on right now."

Clemson opens the season at Memorial Stadium against Furman on Saturday, Sept. 1. USC opens at home against Coastal Carolina on the same day.

Alabama received 61 one first-place votes from a panel of major college coaches. Clemson received three and Ohio State one.

The Associated Press poll will be released on Aug. 20.

Alabama won its fifth national championship under head coach Nick Saban last season, beating Georgia in overtime of the College Football Playoff national title game.

Rounding out the top 10 are Oklahoma, Washington, Wisconsin, Miami, Penn State and Auburn.

Ohio State closes ranks as Meyer probe adds new scandal

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio State closed ranks around the rollout of its football season as the university investigates whether coach Urban Meyer failed to report domestic abuse allegations, a scandal hitting a school already accused of not facing up to sexual misconduct allegations against a sports doctor.

The Buckeyes plan to open their first football practice Friday without Meyer, who was put on administrative leave during the probe and also suspended from an endorsement deal by restaurant chain Bob Evans. It's not clear how restrictive the paid leave will be for the coach who is expected to earn $7.6 million for the 2018 season after getting a raise earlier this year.

Ohio State officials declined comment Thursday beyond barring reporters from practices and saying they would decide by Monday when to allow coaches and players to speak to media. Co-offensive coordinator Ryan Day was named acting head coach while Meyer is out.

"Due to the ongoing investigation, football coaches and student-athletes will not be available for interviews until further notice and all practices will be closed," Ohio State spokesman Jerry Emig said in an email.

Meyer's future with one of the most storied programs in college football depends on how he managed allegations that Buckeyes assistant and recruiting coordinator Zach Smith abused his ex-wife, Courtney Smith — answering the questions of what Meyer knew and when.

Courtney Smith alleged Wednesday that she told Meyer's wife, Shelley, about the abuse in text messages and phone conversations in 2015 and that Shelley Meyer indicated she would tell the head coach. Courtney Smith's allegations — including the text messages — were reported by former ESPN reporter Brett McMurphy on his Facebook page and in a video interview with Smith.

WOODS OPENS WITH 66 AT FIRESTONE JUST TO KEEP PACE

AKRON, Ohio — Tiger Woods returned to Firestone and had his lowest opening round of the year at the Bridgestone Invitational.

It was barely enough to keep pace.

Conditions were so soft and vulnerable Thursday that Kyle Stanley opened with a 7-under 63 among the early starters, and even that might not be enough to stay in the lead by the end of the first round. Only nine players from the 36 who teed off early were over par.

Woods made bogey from a fairway bunker on his final hole for a 66. He made five birdies, including a 50-foot putt from just short of the 18th green as he was making the turn. Woods is an eight-time winner at Firestone, which is hosting this World Golf Championship for the last time.

OBITUARIES

JAMES T. RICHARDSON

On Aug. 1, 1943, in Nyack, New York, the late John L. and Thelma Thompson Richardson, were blessed with their second child, a son whom they named James T. Richardson. "Jimmy," as we all knew him by, received his education in the New York City schools, where he graduated from Theodore Roosevelt High School in Bronx, New York. Jimmy worked for the city of New York as a park director and later for the New York City Transit Authority as a subway conductor, where he retired after more than 25 years of service. Jimmy always visited Sumter, which is where he relocated to after retirement to join his longtime friend, Archie.

Jimmy began attending LaGree AME Church, along with Archie, where he later joined while under the leadership of the Rev. Henry Williams. Jimmy was a faithful member of LaGree, serving on the trustee board, the male chorus, church photographer and a devoted local president of the Sons of Allen. Jimmy loved being around people and loved taking pictures. Before you knew it, he would snap a picture of you in a split second and would politely walk away. Jimmy love the New York Mets and the New York Giants. He traveled to Canada, Las Vegas, cruised many islands, and attended all of the Montgomery family reunions.

Jimmy was affiliated with the Masons under the King Hiram Grand Lodge in Newark, New Jersey, where he received his 33rd Degree.

To ensure the safety of our children and to facilitate a smooth flow of traffic, we ask that you adhere to our traffic procedures.

Procedures for dropping off and picking up are as follows:

Dropping off: Cars are required to keep to the right upon entering the campus. Please stay in the right lane and have your child exit the car on the sidewalk side. If it is necessary for you to come inside, use the second parking lot on the left side of the campus. This parking lot is safer as it has a sidewalk all the way to the building. Instructional time begins promptly at 7:50 a.m.

Picking up: Keep to the right, and drive alongside the sidewalk. For safety reasons, we require only one lane of traffic to pick up or drop off children. Please pull your car up as far as possible so that we may load several children at once. Do not get out of your car to come get your child. If you need to park and come inside, park in a designated space in the parking lot. Do not park on the grass. Montessori and K5 will pick up in the front of the building. K4 will pick up from the K4 hall exit. First grade will pick up at the end of the front hall, and traffic will loop through the parking lot to exit the campus.

Nursery vans: Nursery vans will use the bus driveway and will pick up children at the back of the cafeteria.

The first day of school is Monday, Aug. 20. School hours are from 7:50 a.m. to 2:35 p.m. Students are tardy after 7:50 a.m. Dismissal times are as follows: Montessori, 2:10 p.m.; PreK (K4), 2:15 p.m.; K5 and first grade, 2:35 p.m.; nursery vans, 2:30 p.m.; buses on arrival.

We ask that students go home the way they arrive the first day of school.

Cross items off your list

BY COURTNEY JESPERSEN
NerdWallet

Before you start back-to-school shopping for your elementary or high school student, find ways to cut down on the number of supplies you have to buy. Here's how.

KEEP THE LIST IN YOUR HANDS

Bringing your children to the store when you shop could lead to more items in your shopping cart — and more pressure to buy specific products.

To avoid this, get your children involved in the process ahead of time. Have them browse store ads at home and point out things they like before you shop, recommends Deborah Meyer, a certified financial planner and owner of WorthyNest financial firm in Missouri.

When it comes time to hit the stores, leave the kids at home. That way, you can decide what to buy and what to leave on the shelf.

OR, LET YOUR KIDS HELP OUT

If you'd rather take your kids with you, teach them about budgeting and prioritization, recommends Jill Fopiano, CEO and president of O'Brien Wealth Partners LLC in Boston.

"They should get what they really need, of course, but maybe also one or two things that they really want," Fopiano says. "And perhaps they put some of their allowance money toward that."

In fact, in recent years, students are contributing more of their own money toward back-to-school purchases, according to Katherine Cullen, director of retail and consumer insights at the National Retail Federation.

CROSS OUT THINGS YOU DON'T NEED

Some items can be skipped altogether, or at least avoided for a while. Say no to excessive items, Fopiano says.

"That 100-box of crayons may seem pretty tempting, but in reality, the novelty will wear off pretty quickly. So stick to the basics and really just the essential items."

Follow the supply list from your child's teacher. And even then, exercise discretion. Over the years, more items have been added to school supply lists, like electronics. To counter the extra cost, remove, reduce or swap out some items.

For example, just because the list calls for large quantities doesn't mean you need them all right away. "They certainly don't need 48 pencils the first day," Fopiano says. "Even the biggest pencil-breaker or chewer doesn't need 48 the first day."

Remember, you have room within categories as well. A digital planner app could substitute for a paper bound planner. A quality backpack can get the job done, even if it's not the exact pattern or character your child wants.

Tips to pay off student debt early

Recent college graduates may be entering the job market with degrees in tow, but many also are leaving school with sizable amounts of student loan debt.

According to a 2017 report from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, student loan debt rose for the 18th consecutive year, while Debt.org reports that student debt in the United States totaled $1.4 trillion in 2017.

Canadian students are not faring much better than their American counterparts, owing an average of $28,000 after four years according to the Canadian Federation of Students.

Student loan debt is a heavy burden that has short- and long-term effects on borrowers.

Sizable student loan debts may affect young professionals' ability to support themselves, while the Federal Reserve Bank of New York reports that such debt has contributed to a decline in the housing market, as fewer college graduates can afford to buy homes while still in their 20s.

The notion of paying off their student loans before they reach maturity may seem implausible to some borrowers. But there are a handful of ways for adults with sizable student debts to do just that.

• Make more frequent payments. Many homeowners pay their mortgages off early by making bi-weekly payments. Doing so means they will make 26 half-payments, or 13 full payments, each year as opposed to the 12 full payments made by homeowners who pay on a monthly schedule. The same approach can be applied to student loans. That extra annual payment each year can gradually chip away at loan balances, helping borrowers pay loans off before they reach maturity.

• Prioritize paying off high-interest loans. Many students finance their educations by taking out multiple loans. If these loans come with different interest rates, borrowers should pay off the high-interest loans first to reduce the amount they're spending on interest. Borrowers will still need to make minimum payments on other loans, but any extra money they intend to pay each month should go toward paying down the high-interest loan.

• Refinance loans. Many recent college graduates do not have lengthy credit histories, and some might be carrying low credit scores. Once such borrowers have shown that they can consistently make payments in full and on time, they can approach their lenders to refinance their loans in the hopes of getting a lower interest rate reflective of their creditworthiness. Refinancing may only be available to borrowers with private loans, but this strategy can save student debt holders a lot of money over the life of their loans.

• Take advantage of offers from lenders. Some lenders may reduce interest rates for borrowers who agree to certain terms, such as signing up to receive e-statements or enrolling in automatic payment programs in which money is deducted directly from a borrower's bank account on the same day each month. The savings created by such offers may seem insignificant each month but can add up over time.

Paying off student loan debts early can be done, even for borrowers whose debts are tens of thousands of dollars.

Things adults should know about going back to school

Upon taking inventory of their lives at the start of a new year, some people entertain thoughts of returning to school.

Adults who decide to return to school after a long layoff are following a popular path. According to the education resource Education Corner, a growing number of career colleges and vocational training schools now offer bachelor's and graduate degree programs geared toward working adults.

People return to school for various reasons, including the chance to learn new skills or further develop their existing skills. Some return to school because they are changing careers, while others may have lost a job or desire a promotion and feel that attaining a higher level of education or new skills can make reaching that goal more likely.

Adults who hope to return to school might be surprised to learn that the educational landscape has changed considerably since they were last in a classroom.

• College students are no longer just young men and women who begin pursuing degrees right out of high school. In fact, the number of adults returning to the classroom has increased considerably, often making younger students the exception rather than the rule, says the college financial planner Straighter Line. According to the U.S. Department of Education, college students 25 years or older comprise 40 percent of all students enrolled in college.

• Adults who are thinking about returning to school are urged to fill out the free applications for student aid to see if they qualify. Grants and scholarships may be available, and some workers find that employers may match funds or offer some assistance to finance job training courses.

• Many schools now offer online courses that make it easier for working adults to pursue their degrees.

Many working adults are returning to school to pursue new or advanced degrees, as more colleges and universities are facilitating such pursuits.
